

NOTABLE ADDRESSES AT THE LINCOLN MEMORIAL FARM FRIDAY

President Roosevelt, Governor Willson, Governor Folk, Generals Wright And Wilson All Speak To Many Thousand At Hodgenville.

President's Lincoln Proclamation.

Whereas, By joint resolution of Congress it is provided "that the twelfth day of February, 1909, the same being the centennial anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, be and the same is hereby made a special legal holiday in the District of Columbia and the territories of the United States;" and,

Whereas, By the said joint resolution the President is authorized to issue a proclamation in accord with the foregoing setting apart the twelfth day of February, 1909, as a special legal holiday:

Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, in virtue of the authority conferred upon me by the said joint resolution, do hereby set apart the twelfth day of February, 1909, as a special legal holiday.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this eleventh day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nine, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-third.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

By the President: Robert Bacon, Secretary of State.

Crowds of People.

HODGENVILLE, Ky., Feb. 12.—Last night and this morning long caravans of people from all the neighboring counties moved into this little town and last night beds and shelter were at a premium.

Bright and early yesterday morning Governor Folk, Clarence Mackay, Robert J. Collier, Richard Lloyd Jones and a half dozen other specialists of the Lincoln Farm Association arrived and Hodgenville turned out. Every man, woman and child in town was down "at the train." The party proceeded to the farm, where Governor Folk put the country folk on the witness stand. All of them told of the recollections their ancestors had of Thomas Lincoln and of the boy Abraham.

Arrived Early.

The President's special train arrived about 11:30 this morning. He, the members of his family, General Wright, General Wilson and the others were driven in carriages to the farm. The President was escorted by Union and Confederate soldiers, a squad of Deputy Sheriffs, mounted police from Louisville, Company C., of the First Regiment, K. N. G. and a detail of officers.

Governor Willson, his staff and other distinguished guests arrived on the second train and a third and a fourth train brought soldiers in full regalia, brass bands and 1,200 to 1,500 citizens of Louisville.

Ceremonies Were Brief.

The ceremonies at the farm were brief. Governor Folk of Missouri, made an address on behalf of the Lincoln Farm Association.

The President was enthusiastically received and spoke in part as follows:

One of Greatest Americans.

We have met here to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the birth of one of the two greatest Americans; of one of the two or three greatest men of the nineteenth century; of one of the greatest men in the world's history. This rail splitter, this boy who passed his unguilty youth in the dire poverty of the poorest of the frontier folk, whose rise was by weary and painful labor, lived to lead his people through the burning flames of a struggle from which the nation emerged, purified as by fire, born anew to a loftier life. After long years of iron effort, and of failure that came more often than victory, he at last rose to the leadership of the Republic, at the moment when that leadership had become the stupendous world-task of the time.

Fortunate as People.

As a people we are indeed beyond measure fortunate in the characters of the two greatest of our public men, Washington and Lincoln. Widely though they differed in externals, the Virginia landed gentleman and the Kentucky backwoodsman, they were alike in essentials, they were alike in the great qualities which made each able to do service to his nation and to all mankind such as no other man of his generation could or did render. Each had lofty ideals, but each in striving to attain these lofty ideals was guided by the soundest common sense. Each possessed inflexible courage in adversity, and a soul wholly unspotted by prosperity. There have been other men as great and other men as good; but in all the history of mankind there are no other two great men as good as these, no other good men as great.

The Way of Lincoln.

Yet perhaps the most wonderful thing of all, and, from the standpoint of the America of today and of the future, the most vitally important was the extraordinary way in which Lincoln could fight valiantly against what he deemed wrong and yet preserve undiminished his love and respect for the brother from whom he differed.

He lived in days that were great and terrible, when brother fought against brother for what each sincerely deemed to be the right. In a contest so grim the strong men who alone can carry it through are rarely able to do justice to the deep convictions of those with whom they grapple in mortal strife. At such times men see through a glass darkly; to only the rarest and loftiest spirits is vouchsafed that clear vision which gradually comes to all, even to the lesser, as the struggle fades into distance, and wounds are forgotten, and peace creeps back to the hearts that were hurt. But Lincoln was given this supreme vision. He did not hate the man from whom he differed. Weakness was as foreign as wickedness to his strong, gentle nature; but his courage was of a quality so high that it needed no bolstering of dark passion. He saw clearly that the same high qualities, the same courage, and willingness for self-sacrifice, and devotion to the right as it was given them to see the right, belonged both to the men of the North and to the men of the South. As the years roll by, and as all of us, wherever we dwell, grow to feel an equal pride in the valor and self-devotion, alike of the men who wore the blue and the men who wore the gray, so this whole nation will grow to feel a peculiar sense of pride in the mightiest of the mighty men who mastered the mighty days; the lover of his country and of all mankind; the man whose blood was shed for the union of his people and for the freedom of a race, Abraham Lincoln."

Gov. Willson Speaks.

Governor Willson spoke on behalf of the State of Kentucky and General Wright and Wilson made addresses on behalf of the Confederate and Union soldiers respectfully.

The President left very shortly after the ceremonies to hurry back to Washington.

CLEVER WORK BY THE LOCAL DETECTIVES

Officers Ballard and Tanner Land Brass Thief in a Short Time.

A very clever piece of detective work was performed Thursday afternoon by officers John Ballard and Albert Tanner. A young white man named John Dwyer broke into the old brick yard in the northwestern part of the city and stole over 200 pounds of brass of the engine and brought it to town and sold it to J. W. Hisle, the junk man, at 4 o'clock.

The matter was immediately reported to officers Tanner and Ballard and by 4:30 young Dwyer was behind the bars, the brass returned to the owner and the money returned to the one who purchased it.

The brass belongs to Mr. B. F. Curtis, who owns the brick yard. Mr. Curtis told one of the officers that the brass was worth $200 if he had to buy it new to replace what had been taken.

Dwyer's examining trial will be held before Judge F. P. Pendleton Friday night in Police court.

O Captain, my Captain, our fearful trip is done!
The ship has weathered every rack; the prize we sought is won;
The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring:
But O heart, heart, heart,
O the bleeding drops of red,
Where on the deck my Captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead!

LUMBER DEALERS TO GATHER AT LOUISVILLE

Several Winchester Men to Speak at Banquet There Next Week.

The third annual session of the Kentucky Retail Lumber Dealers' Association will meet at Louisville next Tuesday and Wednesday.

George Tomlinson, of this city, is President and will preside as Toastmaster at the closing banquet.

George Hon will speak on the Shingle Trade, and Hon. John E. Garner will respond to the toast, "Nothing in Particular."

HAVE RENTED FARM.

Thomas and Otis Stuart, of Virginia, have rented the farm of George H. Fox, near Pine Grove, and will reside there. They are sons of Dr. Walter Stuart, of Farmville, Va., and formerly of this county.

No man is as wicked in his acts as he is in his thoughts.

A GOOD FELLOW MAKES GOOD WITH AUDIENCE

Play, Replete With Amusing Incidents, Keeps Crowd in Uproar.

Mark Swan's new comedy, "A Good Fellow," with Miss Alice Williams in the leading role, pleased a large audience at the Winchester Opera House last evening. The play, which is replete with nonsense and surprising situations, kept the crowd highly amused. All of the members of the cast played their parts splendidly.

FILES NOTICE OF CONTEST.

STANFORD, Ky., Feb. 12.—M. S. Baughman, the defeated candidate in the primary held here February 6, for the Democratic nomination for Sheriff, has filed notice of contest against W. L. McCarty, who received a majority of 14 on the face of the returns.

ONE OF STRONG BANKS OF STATE

Clark County National Has Remarkable Record For Over 43 Years.

The report of the condition of the Clark County National Bank published in another column of today's issue of The News, shows that this city contains one of the strongest financial institutions in the State of Kentucky.

The individual deposits of its customers subject to check are $2,089,477.15. This is double the amount of the deposits of any Lexington bank and greater than that of any other in the State outside of the city of Louisville.

The Clark County National has a long and honorable record. It was established over forty-three years ago and its present cashier, Mr. B. F. Curtis, has been connected with the institution 37 years, during 22 of which he has been cashier. In all, there has been but four cashiers in the bank.

During this long period, the bank has never missed declaring its semi-annual dividend which has in that time averaged over five per cent a year. It has never refused in its whole history any check that has come in nor has a cashier's check ever been issued for any purpose. The bank has always paid in currency all checks. This is a remarkable record for any financial institution in the country when the several great panics are remembered.

TEARING DOWN.

Councilman J. D. Jones is tearing away for his new business house on North Main street, having secured a deed to the lot. The delay was caused by a question of ownership for about a foot of ground between the Stubblefield and Taylor heirs.

EXERCISES AT CITY SCHOOL

Mr. R. R. Perry Speaks on "Conditions Which Proved Lincoln's Greatness."

At the City School chapel this morning appropriate exercises were conducted in commemoration of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

A number of songs, suitable to the occasion, were rendered by members of the various classes.

Mr. R. R. Perry was the speaker of the day and his remarks were full of interesting war stories and facts concerning the conditions which gave Lincoln an opportunity to show to the world the ability within him.

Mr. Perry departed from the usual method of delivering a memorial address and gave the pupils a heart to heart talk as to the application of the example set by such men as Mr. Lincoln.

He mentioned the fact that the departed President was vilified and slandered years ago; that a meeting to give honor to him could not have been held in safety during the Civil War; but that the entire nation now gave honor to Mr. Lincoln, irrespective of politics, creed or color. He brought the story home to the pupils by admonishing them against the circulation of slanderous reports and closed by saying that many men and women had gone to their graves in disgrace, who were noble and worthy, because of the effect of false reports either innocently or maliciously circulated.

FARMERS CLUB ON SATURDAY

Great Tobacco Expert, Prof. Sherffus Will Address the Meeting.

The meeting of the Farmers' Club will be held in the circuit court room at the court house, and the exercises will begin at 1 o'clock Saturday instead of 2, as formerly announced. Two o'clock was too late for those who lived very far in the country.

Prof. Sherffus is the greatest tobacco expert in the greatest tobacco State in the Union, or for that matter in the world. He lately received an offer of $5000 a year from the British Government to go to South Africa and teach the Boer farmers the scientific culture of the weed. He will bring with him his machine for grading tobacco seed and will grade enough to show how it is done.

All planters who want their seed graded can get his address and send him their seed and he will grade them and return them free of cost.

Those farmers who are testing their seed corn will be expected to report the results. The meetings of the club would be more enjoyable if the ladies would take an interest and come. Special arrangements will be made for them and if they will show an interest the program committee will see that special features are added to the program for their benefit.

TOBACCO MONEY BEING PAID OUT

Clark County Board of Control Distributing 1907 Money to the Farmers.

The money recently received by the Clark County Board of Control of the Burley Tobacco Society to be distributed among the farmers of this county for the first payment on the 1907 crop is being rapidly paid out. Ever since the announcement was made a few days ago that the money was on hand the secretary of the County Board of Control has been busy issuing the checks.

Lesson VII.—First Quarter, For Feb. 14, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts v, 17-42. Memory Verses, 19, 20—Golden Text, Matt. v, 10—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

Verses 12 to 19 of our lesson chapter, which tell of the healing of all the sick people who were brought to the apostles, are a manifest fulfillment of the last words in Matthew and Mark. "Lo, I am with you always." "The Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following." Such manifestations of the power of the risen Christ are too much for the devil, who is still the spiritual adviser of all who are not controlled by the Holy Spirit, and so the religious rulers are filled with indignation by the evil one, and the apostles are cast into prison that they may thus do no more harm to the enemy's property by robbing him of people whom he had hitherto controlled. But, as usual, the enemies of the Lord imagine a vain thing, and the Lord has them, in derision (Ps. li, 1-4). Storm and tempest, fiery furnace or lions' den, prison gates and walls, are no hindrance to the Lord nor to His angels, who excel in strength and who delight to do His bidding (Ps. ciii, 20). The apostles, being still in mortal bodies, need to have doors opened for them, but even that proves no hindrance to an angel. So He who never slumbers nor sleeps sent His messenger by night to liberate His servants that they might go to the temple and speak to the people the words of life, and this they did. The next morning, when the high priest and his council and senate were assembled, they sent to the prison to bring the apostles, but while the prison was secure, as usual, and the keepers on duty there were no apostles within.

How it makes one's heart laugh to see God laughing at his enemies! There is nothing too wonderful for the Creator of heaven and earth (Jer. xxxii, 17). We do not wonder that they doubted "whereunto this would grow." We know that it will grow, in spite of all that the adversary can do, until every proud and haughty thing shall be laid low and "the Lord alone shall be exalted" (Isa. ii, 11, 17). Having learned that the prisoners were free men and teaching in the temple, they sent for them, brought them without violence and set them before the council, accusing them of bringing the blood of Jesus on the rulers and demanding of them why they continued teaching in this name after being forbidden to do so. They seemed to forget that they had cried, "His blood be on us and on our children" (Matt. xxvii, 25). Peter boldly replied that God must be obeyed rather than men and then once more to their face accused them of slaying Jesus, asserting that God had raised Him from the dead and exalted Him to His own right hand as a Prince, and a Saviour to give repentance and forgiveness even to them and that they, the apostles, were His witnesses by the power of the Holy Ghost. That settled the fate of the apostles in the minds of the council, and so they took counsel to kill them. The great murderer would fain accomplish some more of his devilish work and dispose of them as he had of their Master. They were quite ready for such a result, for they had been told to expect it (John xvi, 1-4). They were the same generation of vipers, or seed of the serpent (these Jews), as those to whom Jesus had said that they would do these very things. They were, as He said, of their father the devil (Matt. xxiii, 33, 34; John viii, 44). There are in this world only two classes, the righteous and the unrighteous, the children of God and the children of the wicked one, and there are in the future just two destinations, the kingdom and the glory and the place of torment. God is not willing that any should perish and has provided in His Son a redemption sufficient for all, but if people prefer the blindness and darkness of the god of this world (II Cor. iv, 4); if they still say, "Not this man, but Barabbas; we will not have this man to reign over us; we have no king but Caesar," then it must be understood that they declare themselves enemies of God, for "the friendship of this world is enmity with God" (Jas. iv, 4). "The free gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom. vi, 23 R. V.), but if men deliberately choose the wages of sin in preference who is to blame?

The counsel of Gamaliel in verses 38, 39, was in accord with Isa. viii, 9, 10; xiv, 24; xlii, 12; xliii, 13; lvi, 17, and other good words of the prophets, and to him they agreed, but they deemed it necessary to give the apostles a beating and to forbid them to make further mention of the name of Jesus (verse 40). Thus they declared themselves decidedly against Jesus Christ and that they would blot out His name if possible. They would not believe that God had highly exalted Him and given Him a name which is above every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come, and that all shall yet bow to Him either in glad submission or to hear Him say, "Depart from me, ye cursed" (Phil. ii, 9, 10; Eph. i, 21).

In contrast to these proud, religious children of the evil one see these two rejoicing men, happy because they had been counted worthy to suffer.

BREAKFAST COSTUME AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

Garment of White Flannelette Is Effective—Frills and Girdle of Ribbon and Lawn Ruffles for Neck and Sleeves.

Every woman has at least one dinner gown in her wardrobe. At luncheon she is careful to wear a frock that is becoming and in good style, in case a friend might drop in. How often does she consider her appearance at breakfast? Anything is good enough to put on then, because only the family are there. It is a curious thing that she is least anxious to please those for whom she cares most. It may seem impossible, but there are women who even go to the table with their hair in curl papers, wearing such an atrocity as a calico wrapper. There is, perhaps, nothing in the whole gamut of wearing apparel so fatal to a woman's good looks as one of these poorly-cut garments, and they are invariably of a crude color. One of these wrappers, in combination with curl papers, is enough to make any man fancy that the muffins are stony, and so subside behind the morning paper in grim silence.

A woman should live up to her part as mistress of the manor, and do her best to be attractive and cheerful in the morning. Often the whole day is influenced by the mental state of different members of the family at the breakfast table, and if one is disagreeable then the day for all is begun unhappily, and is likely to end so. There really is no need of being grumpy in the morning, for it is the beginning of a new day, and every day has some bright spots, if we look for them.

A woman can do more than she realizes, by simply being pleasant and looking sweet and dainty in a little breakfast jacket and cap. It will make one feel good for the rest of the day just to look at her.

These little caps are wonderfully becoming, and lend a charming dignity to the wearer.

Women may rest assured that this little effort on their part to start the day happily will be thoroughly appreciated by all members of the family, and they, in their turn, will help make the morning meal a congenial affair, instead of the hurried affair it so often has become.

The costume shown to-day is very effective made of a white flannelette, with sky blue polka dots. It is edged with a frill of blue wash ribbon. Deep white lawn ruffles finish the neck and sleeves. The girdle is of blue ribbon.

Hint for Papering.

In papering any room it should be remembered that light is the first consideration, and that the paper must be chosen accordingly.

Pure white is the best choice when a specially light room is wanted, as it absorbs only about 15 per cent of the light thrown upon it. Dark green, on the other hand, is the greatest consumer of light, absorbing about 85 per cent.

Next to white as a light producer are the soft pastel tints and light blues, which absorb from 20 to 25 per cent of the light; then comes orange at 30 per cent; apple and gray greens, almost 50 per cent, and the popular brown is almost as bad as dark green, as it takes up about 65 to 70 per cent of the light it should throw out.

Glass Lampshades.

If imitation is the sincerest flattery, the artistic value of cretonne is established beyond a doubt by the new glass lamp shades, which seem to be huge frames covered with dainty cretonne—until you tap one with an investigating finger. The glass is fluted and wrinkled to follow the convolutions of the flower petals and leaves. A square shade of opalescent cream glass has a border of blurred roses that look for all the world like one of the high-class French cretonnes.

Lincoln Centenary

Lincoln's Influence on the World

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

THE WORLD'S TRIBUTE. Few others less notable Lincoln in his own day had little friendship in Europe. He was not of a type to appeal to bureaucracy and formal institutionalism. At the beginning of the war he was little known or, if known at all, was regarded as a country lawyer of slight education, little experience and inferior talents.

His method of handling the Mason and Sidel episode and the general conduct of our diplomatic affairs raised the world's opinion of him as his administration progressed, but still the feeling was not cordial. The temper of Europe was such in that contest that a slight misstep might have plunged us into war. One of Lincoln's greatest triumphs was that he kept us clear of these foreign difficulties. It was not so much hostility to Lincoln as it was hostility to the Union that had to be feared. By caution, patience and statesmanship all this hostility was made powerless to work us harm, and gradually the chancelleries of Europe awakened to the fact that a master mind was in charge at Washington. They also began to understand that the master mind was Lincoln, "the country lawyer," and not Seward, his secretary of state. If Seward had been given his way a war with one or more European nations could scarcely have been averted.

The triumph of the north had a powerful influence in melting foreign hostility. Success succeeds even better with diplomats than with ordinary mortals. The republic divided and threatened with annihilation was one thing. The same republic reunited and more firmly established than ever was quite another. The change of attitude naturally included the head of the nation as well as the nation itself. It must not be imagined, however, that all European sentiment was hostile to the Union. Many of the best men and women in all lands were naturally our friends both because of opposition to slavery and friendship to republicanism. The hearts of the masses for the most part were with us as they ever have been. This sentiment was augmented as the struggle neared a close.

Lincoln's assassination brought out all the latent and active friendship for him abroad as well as at home. It silenced the tongues of his enemies. Following so close upon the termination of the war, it focused the attention and touched the heart of the world. The universal and profound grief shown for the murdered president in his own land revealed to those of other lands that he was a man out of the ordinary, a fact that they had already begun to suspect. The changed attitude toward him was shown in the fine poem written by the editor of the London Punch.

When the world's universal republic is established, of which our own republic is but the forerunner; when there is liberation in all lands that are fanned by the free air as it sweeps about the earth; when self government and the individual strength it fosters have become as common as the sunshine and the rain; when there is a universal religion based on the divinity in man and the common love of God and humanity; when purity of life, loyalty to truth and the sacrifice of self on the altar of the common good are everywhere recognized and practiced, then Abraham Lincoln, who stood for all of these things, will have taken his place among the world's few supremely great souls. That day for all mankind is much nearer because he lived and died. If this nation had been rent asunder in the civil war, if free government had then proved a failure, if slavery had triumphed over freedom, that new era for mankind might have been delayed for centuries or forever. Therefore Lincoln's work in that crisis was not for his own land alone, but for all lands. It was not only to give the black race liberty, but to give all races liberty. It was not merely to assure the Union of these states, but meant eventually that there should be a union for peace and for universal freedom as wide as the earth and as long as the ages.

All these things Lincoln's life and death helped to make possible. Therefore when the "parliament of men" shall indeed come his name should be one of the foremost honored among those who prepared the way.

Are Phenomena

Manufacturers
Belong to Great
Social Movement

By PROF. GEORGE E. VINCENT,
Dean of Faculty of Arts, Literature and Science, University of Chicago.

WHAT interesting phenomena manufacturers are. That is what they are to the social philosopher. They are phenomena. They may not like the classification but they are social phenomena. They belong to a great economic movement that began back in England at the end of the eighteenth century and has been sweeping on irresistibly ever since. It has been carried on by men who preceded the present generation, who saw business opportunities; those men who were called manufacturers because they did not do anything with their hands. Those men who went around and found there were weavers who did not have yarn and who took the yarn from the spinners, and from the spinners to the weavers and they made a little profit on it both ways. Then they found they could get machines that could be used a little more effectively; these they loaned to the workers in their cottages and took another profit; later they gathered all these machines into the factory and the factory system was established. So it has been in all the trades and industries. The manufacturers of to-day and the men who preceded them are responsible for the city of to-day. It is an industrial revolution which they have brought on. They have multiplied population enormously. If it had not been for the factory system there couldn't have been so many of us. And they have got to keep things going in some way because of their responsibility to the people they have brought into the world as a result of their economic system.

Quit Platitudes, Use the Bluff

By JOHN A. HOWLAND.

Every little while in public prints I run into the narrow preachings of some old-fashioned doctrinaire, counseling the young man how to succeed in life and dishing up strings of old platitudes that are as little effective to-day as the old pony express would be in competition with the Pacific railroads.

I wish some of these old "rules of conduct" preachments were more to the point of practical utility. It would be a pleasant world if they were. But broadly speaking for the present age, that young man who loads himself up with them and steps out new to the world prepared to make capital of such sentiment must be prepared for heartache and failure. He might as well be a Rip Van Winkle, waking with a pocket full of money issued by the confederate states of America.

I know a young man who after most encouraging correspondence with the head of a big corporation traveled a thousand miles or more on the strength of it to become an applicant for a position. In the new, strange surroundings of the distant city he discovered that he had a far different problem on his hands than he had been led to expect.

There was a reception room for the establishment, presided over by a thick-skinned usher whose conception of his duties seemed to be the discouragement of every caller desiring to see any one on the inside. This young man had more than his share of everyday cultivation and refinement and suddenly he awoke to the fact that he had been three weeks in the city without ever having seen a person who might have looked upon his application with favor.

And all the while he was receiving scantier consideration by the usher. The young man grew angry with himself. He knew what he could do and yet after a thousand miles of travel a bluffing attendant at a door way preventing him from stepping over a threshold! The young man went to his room and in the inspiration of his anger at the injustice wrote a note addressed to the department head whom he had wished to see.

"Three weeks ago I began coming here, hoping for a position. Now I feel if only I can get past the door and look into the inner office I will have accomplished quite enough. Maybe when I've seen inside I won't want a job anyhow!"

Next day the attendant scowled at the superscription on the envelope: "John H. Williams, Esq.; Personal." He scowled even more when the young man asked that the envelope be handed to Mr. Williams.

"Take—that—in—to—Mr.—Williams—at once!"

My young man's fighting blood was up at last. In a moment the truculent usher was moving toward the private office. In five minutes the writer was ushered inside the office and when he left it a few minutes later he was an employee of the company!

It is the man who "gets there" who has first choice of opportunity. If you can't "arrive" you won't be commissioned to "go."

No man to-day is wise enough to prescribe a line of ethics for the young man who is entering business. What business? I can imagine a confidence man's going into partnership enthusiastically with some one of this old type of gentility who might promise to be an excellent foil. But to-day culture and aggressive business are little related. "Bluff" will go miles further and not be winded at the finish. Blow your own horn intelligently and hard! Get into the limelight and stay there until you are thrown out! These are the "success" pointers. Believe otherwise at your peril.

Highest Function of the Church

By REV. A. H. STEPHENS,
Presbyterian Pastor, Chicago.

The highest function of the church is to serve the community in which it is located, in its civic, social and religious life. It should feel its responsibility to present a higher type of life than is found elsewhere, less influenced by human prejudice and human passion, freer from compromising entanglements and questionable alliances, exhibiting the purest form of social-circumspection and political and commercial probity.

The community has a right to expect something better from the church than it finds in itself—higher ideals and more unselfish endeavor at their realization. In these respects the church owes it to the community that it shall not be disappointed, but that it shall experience the thrill, if not the surprise, of entire fulfillment.

The church must seek the co-operation and allegiance of the contiguous populations, not for its own good, but for the good of those sought, ever teaching the lesson by example that it is more noble to serve than to be served.

The church must ever be the handmaid of law enforcement and stand aggressively for the suppression of vice and public immorality.

BEAUTIFY YOUR FACTORIES.

Valuable as an Advertising Feature and Beneficial to Employees.

Scores of newspaper articles are written about improvement of public streets; magazines galore are published in regard to beautifying homes and grounds; prizes are offered to certain classes of people as an incentive toward gardening back yards; public playgrounds are established and school yards tastefully kept. We pass judgment on all these things and call them good, says the Los Angeles Times. In this land of sunshine, where vegetation grows with almost no cultivation and where to beautify at least the exterior and grounds of our manufactories would require so little effort, this should be done not only for the moral and aesthetic influence on the employees, but really as an advertising feature, always showing tourists that even working shops can be made beautiful by nature in our California.

Not one but many travelers have remarked about the vine covered water tank (practical thing truly) at a certain station near Los Angeles on the Salt Lake railroad. The eye and mind are rested at seeing a bit of greenery there. The electric power houses stationed at intervals all the way from Pomona valley to several thousand feet above in San Antonio canyon show what can be done in simple landscape gardening in waste places. Every weary climber coming around a bend in the trail up there among the mountains can assure you that the vision of blooming flowers, well kept lawn and maybe a fountain is a welcome sight.

The writer has in mind two factories, one so pretty and refreshing that the passerby thinks it must be a pleasure to sit near the low open windows in summer and glance out occasionally from the work of cutting leather and hammering tacks, for it is a shoe factory in Holland, Mich., to which I refer, to a plot of fresh green grass. That glance does not detract from the work, but makes the fingers more nimble and the mind more clear. Must we of the golden west go back east to find the beautiful in nature combined with utility in supplying the needs of our bodies? Can we have no such ornamental practical factories of our own? Another, perhaps more pretentious, is the home of the famous Rookwood pottery in Cincinnati. Do you doubt that the influence of these beautiful surroundings on the artists who decorate this ware works out through their active fingers? Our ground is as fertile, our workmen as appreciative, our own minds as aesthetic as any in the east. Let us look to our factories, at least to the extent of improving them by the addition of a few clinging vines to hide and soften the glare of walls and the harsh, conventional outlines of the buildings.

Town Booming Funds.

Thirteen cities and towns in the Pacific northwest are actively advertising their attractions and resources in the expectation of increasing their population and building up the agricultural communities around them. Spokane, Wash., spends from $40,000 to $50,000 a year in publicity work. Tacoma, in the same state, which flaunted the famous slogan, "Watch Tacoma grow," at the Lewis and Clark exposition in 1905, spends $10,000 a year in making the town grow. Portland, Ore., uses $48,000 for systematic publicity and finds that it pays. Winnipeg, in Manitoba, finds it profitable to spend $17,000 annually in advertising. Kansas City, Mo., recently inaugurated a campaign of municipal advertising. Hundreds of smaller towns and cities are doing likewise. "It pays to advertise."

Planting Street Trees.

In laying out for street planting let the first stakes be set at the street crossings, says Park and Cemetery. When the abutting streets also are to be planted, place two stakes at each corner about thirty feet from the point of intersection of the curb line on each street. Then space off the intervening distance, setting the stakes equally distant apart, but not less than sixty-five feet as the shortest distance. Street trees generally are planted too closely together. Sometimes this is done with the intention of cutting out alternate ones, as the growth of the trees requires. This, however, is seldom done, and the trees grow up too thickly, thereby overcrowding and injuring one another, destroying all the individual beauty of the trees and the symmetrical arrangement which an avenue of trees should have.

Comfort Stations For Towns.

Anything that tends to advance civilization and promote the welfare of mankind is beneficial to a town. Milwaukee intends to do something in this line, as its board of public works proposes to establish municipal comfort stations throughout the city.

"I am heartily in favor of these comfort stations," said Mayor Becker. "In my travels through Europe I saw a number of the stations in the large cities. They are located in the busy parts of the business districts as well as along the boulevards. For a small fee a person can go into one of these stations, get a towel and hot water and refresh himself without having to go to a hotel to do it. People can also get their clothes brushed and cleaned before filling business engagements. It is a good step toward municipal improvement."

Taboo on Dandelions and Chickens.

The Denver city council is working upon an ordinance providing a fine of $10 for every dandelion allowed to bloom within the city limits. The city council of Florence, Colo., has passed an ordinance imposing a similar fine on the owner for each chicken allowed to run at large.

You Cannot Answer These Questions!

1—Why do you continue bathing your knees and elbows one at a time, when you can stretch out in a full bath tempered to suit you, and can do so every morning if you wish?

2—Why pump and carry water for your kitchen and laundry work when you can have it at hand for the turning of a faucet?

3—Why take chances on drinking germ-filled cistern water when you can get it from a large reservoir filtered through the best filter plant South of the Ohio River?

4—Why have a dry, dismal-looking yard when you can have it filled with green grass and blooming flowers, and can at the same time get rid of the dust in the street?

5—Why suffer other inconveniences when you can have everything for the comfort and health of your family right in the house?

6—Is it not true that the answer is not "lack of money," but lack of economy and enterprise and indifference to getting the most out of life?

LINCOLN.

Man is a breath, and history a span; yet in our little universe of dream there are values infinitely real, and distinctions infinitely worth while. We Americans are occupied this week in celebrating one of those natures who have helped to confirm our beliefs; who have helped to build foundations, upon which future generations might take their stand, so laboring that existence might have more of brightness, of meaning, and of dignity. Abraham Lincoln lived and died, and into the vast mystery of the world there was injected, and remained, something that was noble and beyond denial. So to have lived and died that the world is distinctly richer by a goal made clear, a cause made eloquent—such is the most welcome destiny that can await any infant born into the light. On the rolls of fame is inscribed no name which stands more uncontrovertibly for justice, sympathy, and growth than the name of Lincoln; none which from each succeeding year gains a permanence better earned.

Abraham Lincoln followed one beacon throughout his fifty-nine years upon this earth, and that beacon was the Truth. He was devoted to her; he trusted her, ever and entirely; she was his. He had no other mistress. Now it must needs be that the man of truth is a man also of sorrow. Sympathy, by the very structure of the word, means suffering, and sympathy is the only road to truth. Lincoln suffered, but it was with the sorrow which hope would yield for happiness. It was with the sorrow which contains in itself the entire galaxy of our mortal virtues—insight, and kindness, and wonder, and clear imagination. Sweetest among the beneficial goddesses, who watch above us is this same fair-visaged daughter of the fact, this Sorrow, who takes all the spiritually great into her keeping, and who was seldom absent from Abraham Lincoln's side.

What is to be the future of the land which gave Lincoln birth; and to which he returned in such fulness the debt he owed? For a time after the mighty struggle it looked as if the tone of public and private life had sunk. No stirring moral and intellectual differences kept men keyed high in helpful strife. The manufacture and sale of material things, the development of physical resources and the rapid exploitation of them—these activities seemed untempered by unselfish principle, and the consequences were not good. The twenty-five years which followed the surrender at Appomattox Court House were not the most glorious period in our nation's history. Now, however, we have entered upon an era, we make bold to think, which would have attracted Abraham Lincoln more.

Yes—Lincoln would have been more at home in the American world of 1909 than in that of three decades ago. His was a universe not of brute things but of their essence. Poetry was the background of his thought; vision and high emotion lay behind accident and show. He understood not the spirit of mortal pride; all he understood was service. Could he look down upon his former dwelling-place he would behold the unceasing ebb and flow of justice and oppression, but he would behold also labor toward equality, increasing faith, a secular religion passing over the broad acres of the States. Many an earnest student has sought to spell from Lincoln's words what was his inner conception of God, immortality, and the destiny of man. Lincoln could not have told those thoughts himself. The envelope of the life he saw was mystery. He looked to the future as to a vast and trackless sea; but over that wilderness crowded constellations gave unremitting signals. Of these boundaries and misty dreams Lincoln seldom spoke, save as of poetry, or as of symbols sanctioning the effort of man to choose the better part. What we do know of that lonely figure's thought sheds its light upon the here and now. It brings guidance into the labyrinth of every day. Lincoln's country, therefore, now embarked in good faith upon the quest of right, draws encouragement from remembrance of her inspiring son. To him she turns when the clouds look dark above. Him she thanks when reflecting that man's hard fate yet is easier than it was. The reality of him appears in the constancy with which he seems present, and a help, in the progress which the world is making now.—Collier's Weekly.

ADVERTISING.

The welfare of the nation is to a great degree dependent upon its advertisers.

At first thought this would appear to be an exaggerated statement, but the more it is examined the more true it seems to be.

Advertisement of the past were decidedly crude in every way, but they are daily becoming more artistic, attractive and more educational. Consequently they are creating an impression upon the juvenile mind which time will not efface.

But outside of the impression made upon the younger generation by artistic advertisement, the observer of such matters, should take into consideration the influence which well-built ads. have upon that large class of people who are swayed, more or less, by all they read and, who turn to the advertising pages of a newspaper as the most attractive part of a text-book.

Many people only glance at the regular telegraph, cable and local news of the day and then plunge deeply into the news set forth in the advertising columns. In these they become deeply absorbed.

This is not the case with women alone. They take to the advertisements as naturally as a duck takes to water. Business men and others of the commercial turn of mind are continually on the watch for opportunities to make a few more dollars, to improve their homes, to get a new automobile to add to their real estate holdings, to select a place of amusement, and so on.

To many people there is more news of interest to them personally in the advertising columns of their favorite paper than in any other part of the paper.

Under these circumstances it is not safe to assume that advertisements have a great influence upon readers of all ages and classes? In fact, the great object of advertising is to influence. If of an artistic and educational nature it must, it would appear, have a beneficial effect upon the present and rising generations.

Good advertising tends to turn the character of the people, to soften and refine home life, by introducing into families articles of luxury and objects which otherwise would not

President Lincoln's Speech at Gettysburg

Four score and seven years ago, our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great Civil War, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We are met to dedicate a portion of it as the final resting-place of those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate, we can not consecrate, we can not hallow, this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, consecrated it far find their way there.

Books, soaps, perfumery, laces, silks, furniture, pictures, draperies, etc., when largely advertised in the newspapers attract the heads of households or the younger members of families. Little by little homes here and there undergo changes, and dismal, dark interiors assume a brightness and refinement utterly undreamed of before the smile of publicity beamed upon all concerned.

Homes thus improved become more attractive, families become more attractive and happy, and in short, the advertiser does an amount of good which he did not anticipate and influences whole communities while adding considerably to his bank account.—Editorial in Fourth Estate.

MUCH INTEREST IN VALENTINE PARTY

More Than 100 Couples Will Be Seen On Floor of Rink Friday Night.

A great deal of interest is being manifested among the skating devotees of this city in the valentine party that is to be given at the Auditorium Friday night under the auspices of Hart Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. There will be over 100 couples seen in the grand march and many new, beautiful and graceful figures will be introduced.

The skaters will all be furnished with colors to wear in the march to suit the occasion. The entertainment bids fair to be the prettiest and most enjoyable event of its kind that has taken place here this season.

Remember the proceeds will go to help erect a monument here to the memory of Joel T. Hart, the world's famous sculptor, who was born in this county.

USE FOR OLD TABLECLOTHS.

When Worn, They Are Made Into Covers for Card Tables.

One housekeeper has found a somewhat novel use for her old tablecloths that are too worn for use; she cuts them into covers for her card tables.

As the family is an inveterate lover of games of all sorts there are a number of the green-covered card tables in the house. These soon get so dusty as to soil light dresses. To prevent this they are covered each time before playing with squares made from the old tablecloths.

The cloth is cut into squares two or three inches larger than the table, are hemmed neatly all around and tapes are fastened at each corner to tie the cover around the legs of the table.

If one has no old tablecloth that can be converted to such a use, cheap and attractive covers can be made from heavy linen, with a narrow scallop embroidered around the edge and a monogram in one corner that rests on the table. If desired, the corners can be cut at right angles to make the cloth fit more easily and prevent it from slipping up.

Sam Noticed the Distinction.

A rich man once visited his stables and watched an old groom currying a favorite horse. "You have worked for me a long time, haven't you, Sam?" queried the rich man. "Yes, sir," replied the groom. "Me an' this horse have worked for you 17 years." "Ah, and I hope you have been well treated, Sam," said the employer. "Oh, I ain't complainin' none," said Sam. "But me an' th' hoss was sick at th' same time, an' I noticed that while you hired a doctor for th' hoss you docked my pay for th' time I lost."

Thriving for Information.

Little Gertrude, entering a butcher's shop for the first time, stood gazing around her in silent absorption. Presently she took her mother by the hand, and, leading her to where hung a string of bologna sausages, she put a tiny finger on one big sausage and gravely inquired: "Mamma, what was this when it was alive?"—Exchange.

above our power to add or to detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work that they have thus far so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to the cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that the dead shall not have died in vain; that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

MT. STERLING PLANS NEW SEWER SYSTEM

Mayor Has Appointed Committee of Three to Investigate and Report.

MT. STERLING, Ky., Feb. 12.—A committee has been appointed by Mayor C. W. Harris for the purpose of securing plans for a sewerage system in Mt. Sterling. The committee is composed of W. C. Hamilton, W. A. Samuels and R. G. Kern. If the plans are approved a vote on an issuance of bonds to cover the cost of the system will be submitted to the voters.

SMART COATS WITHOUT CANVAS.

Fashion Eliminates Weight from the Skirt as Well as the Coat.

Not content with eliminating weight from the waist, the fashions demand that the coat should be as light as Shetland wool. Canvas is now eliminated except for customers who demand it. Whether or not this is quite pretty on the American figure is not the point here; the thing is that the coat has been considerably lightened by its omission.

The coat is not cut in what is known as skeleton fashion. It does not pretend to fit the figure. The rule is to cut it on perfect lines, leave out the canvas, put in lamb's wool for interfacing, and adjust it to the wearer. If her figure isn't just like the coat she at least gives the semblance of perfection, because the lines of the coat may deceive anybody.

Lamb's wool gives the greatest warmth in the lightest weight, and this is the decided advantage for its use as an interlining. Therefore practically this light-weight costume rests on the shoulders, which are better able to stand weight than any other part of the body. The sleeves themselves have all fullness eliminated in the coat and are reduced to a mere handful of net on the blouse. Therefore weight is taken off the arm.

One can easily see how restful is the modern costume by a summary of its advantages. Women have carried around too much weight and had too little freedom of muscles for their comfort. Now they are rejoicing in the Grecian freedom the modern costume gives. They say they will never change. This they have vainly said too often for it to sound sincere.

HATS ARE TO BE SMALLER.

That Seems to Be Millinery Forecast at Present.

There is a system among milliners of making up brilliant spring hats in January for the people who are going south. These hats are supposed to be the forerunners of the coming styles.

If they are, and even the milliners cannot prophesy surely so far ahead, this season, the hats that are worn as the warm weather comes in will be smaller than the enormous affairs of this winter.

They are still large enough, following the sailor shape, but the brims roll more, especially at the right side.

Flowers in great quantities are used as trimming, especially the huge shaded roses. Touches of gold ribbon or gauze are put in among these.

The new touch, however, is the wide ribbon placed at the sides well back of the ears. They begin in rosettes, are drawn loosely over the brim and the carelessly under the chin in a wide bow and ends.

Black velvet ribbon is often used, but all the new colors in satin are drawn upon for this purpose.

As an evidence against society, we have noticed that when a man goes to a party he swears he will never go again.

UNIQUE CELEBRATION FOR TURF QUEEN.

Nancy Hanks Will Receive Friday on Madden Farm.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 12.—The reception to Nancy Hanks at the Hamburg Place farm of John E. Madden today will be the most elaborate ever given to a horse in this country. Nancy Hanks is the former trotting Queen named in honor of the mother of Abraham Lincoln. Madden has sent one of the engraved invitations to President Theodore Roosevelt, Secretary of Agriculture, James A. Wilson, Secretary of War Luke E. Wright, Gov. Augustus E. Wilson, and other notables who will participate in the Lincoln celebration in Larue county. It is believed that some of those invited from a distance will arrange to attend the unique celebration.

You will have the time of your life at the Valentine Party Friday night at the rink. 2-10-31.

Chief Justice's Golf Stroke.

The lord chief justice, on circuit at Birmingham, had a curious experience while playing golf over the Edgbaston course with Walter Whiting, the local professional. At the second hole his lordship drove into a bunker, the ball lying badly under the bank. Taking his niblick, he hit hard. The ball jumped into the air and dropped into his right-hand jacket pocket.—London Standard.

A Journalist Is Born.

You cannot teach a man to be a journalist, for he is born, not made; and the real journalists spring at once—like the late G. W. Stevens—into their place. A lecturer on journalism would bore one far beyond the limits of this paragraph. For the journalist is the man who is interested in other lives. And a lecturer in London Chronicle.

SOLDIER BALKS DEATH PLOT.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a civil war veteran, of Kemp, Texas, that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." For severe Colds, obstinate Coughs, Hemorrhages, Asthma, and to prevent Pneumonia it's unrivaled. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Phillips Drug Company.

SOCIETY

RARE PORTRAITS OF MR. AND MRS. LINCOLN.

These portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln are among the best in existence. Mrs. Lincoln's photographs are very rare. This one shows her in evening dress and was taken on the occasion of a reception at the White House not a great while before the assassination of the president.

The "Cooking Club" will have its meeting with Miss Kathleen Earp on Saturday.

The Literary and Social Club will have another of its interesting meetings with Miss Anna Mae Hisle on Saturday afternoon.

The Little Colonel Readers will meet with Miss Emma Thomson on Saturday.

A Recital.

Mrs. Flora Hughtart will have one of her charming recitals on Friday afternoon.

Valentine Party.

The Hart Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will have a most interesting party at the Auditorium this evening. This will be a Valentine skating party. The skaters will be dressed in white and trimmings to carry out the Valentine idea which will be furnished by the daughters. The skating will be an attractive feature of the evening, but there will be no prizes given. To make things more interesting, they will have candies for sale.

There will be a real live sure enough gypsy fortune teller, who will hold your hand and read your future. Will tell your fate, whether it be good or bad. If you want to know if you are going to get the ones you love best, just come out Friday night and find out.

They will also have Valentines to sell. You may purchase them and drop them in the postoffice, which you will find in the building. It will be great fun to watch the people receive them.

The daughters now have eighteen members and are trying to obtain money enough to build a statue of Joel T. Hart. They already have a guarantee of $1000 and are trying to add to that all the time.

PERSONALS.

Mr. H. G. Garrett and his charming daughter, Miss Winnie, left Thursday morning for Hodgenville to attend the Lincoln Centennial.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS.

Mr. J. W. Rice.

The burial of Mr. J. W. Rice, who died suddenly Wednesday night took place in the Winchester Cemetery at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

The services were conducted at the grave by Rev. C. E. Crafton, of the Washington Street Presbyterian church.

The following acted as pall bearers: W. P. Hampton, Clarence Ogden, J. W. Hollar, D. S. Haggard, J. E. Botkin, Hubert Hunter.

The story that was published in The News that Mr. Rice fell on Main street was incorrect. He suffered a stroke of paralysis at the home of Mr. Hubert Hunter between two and three o'clock Wednesday afternoon. He was removed to his home where he died two hours later without regaining consciousness. He was 61 years of age and leaves a wife and six children survivors. Mr. Rice had a heavy stroke of paralysis seven years ago.

DRESS FOR A YOUNG GIRL.

Most Appropriate Made Up in Old Rose-Dyed Shantung.

This would be a very charming dress for a girl of 18 years. Made up in old rose-dyed shantung, the skirt is very high-waisted and is joined to the bodice; a panel of tucked glace silk the same color as the shantung is taken from the shoulders, and continued down to the hem of skirt; the arm-hole trimming and cuffs are also of tucked silk; velvet to match edges the tucked silk, forms a waistband, and trims the foot of skirt. The yoke is of piece lace.

Materials required: Nine yards shantung 34 inches wide, five yards glace silk, 3 1/2 yards velvet.

FLOWERS TRIM FUR TURBANS.

Bunch of Brilliant Red Velvet Geraniums Adorn Turban of Ermine.

A cluster of gardenias with their glossy green foliage is often the only trimming, and roses of gold tissue are much used upon the darker furs, two or three of them being tucked into the fur at the left side. One very effective French turban in ermine was trimmed in a glowing bunch of velvet geraniums shading from brilliant red to pink, and on another white turban was posed one huge purple orchid.

In addition to the round shapes there are many fur turbans slightly boat shaped, though even these, while being longer than they are wide, must come down well over the head and so of necessity have a considerable width. Some excellent scarf and bow effects are achieved in connection with these models—and, indeed, with the round turban also—and when they are becoming these shapes, adorned with knots or flatly applied bows of white supple satin or metallic tissue, with probably pendant ends finished in fringe or balls, are tremendously chic.

Fruit and the Complexion.

The appearance of the complexion is greatly influenced by the food we eat. As a general thing it is more beneficial to take fruit with the meal or just before it than it is after. Fruit is an essential part of the diet, but it is not a complete diet in itself. It aids various forms of secretion which prove most beneficial to the digestion. It has a nutritious bulk which prevents one from overloading the stomach with heavier and less easily digested foods. When fruit is eaten as a first course for breakfast one is not so likely to overeat when the pancakes with syrup and eggs appear. A healthy breakfast consists of fruit as a first course and crisp toast and a nutritious cereal. Oats lead the cereals in food value. Preparations made from this grain are really the best and cheapest in the end, although a lighter cereal, such as corn or wheat, is often more desirable in hot weather.

Smart Use of Fur and Tulle.

Could there be anything more luxurious and regardless of the exigencies of cost and weather than this trailing of priceless furs on the floor behind one. Note a chinchilla cloak hanging in this fashion over a black liberty satin frock, which in its Empress proves hardly a foundation for the heavy furs, the fur garment sleeveless and showing the length of a pink arm under black tulle, fur stole ends in front touching the satin molding knees, its top dropping low about the shoulders of a tulle guimpe, a raff of ermine high up about the throat, a drum major fur hat jammed down about the head into pink ear and penciled brow, and a muff as big as a barrel, does not this show the inconsequential and the aesthetic carried to its limit?—Vogue.

Printed Pique.

Among the new fabrics to be shown on the counters for the early spring sewing is printed white pique. They have already been used in Paris, and will probably find wide favor over here.

The pique is rather soft, and it is covered with stripes, dots and flowers in all the new colors. It is a trifle heavy for shirtwaists, but it makes admirable one-piece summer gowns. Strips of it are also used for collar and cuffs and skirt borders on white linen gowns and suits.

IS USEFUL IN MANY WAYS.

Dainty Work Tray, a Great Convenience for Busy Woman.

The illustration shows a work-tray—the utility of it is seen at a glance. For the nursery it is specially useful; it can stand on a side table with socks for darning in it, or any piece of work that might be taken up at odd times.

It can easily be made out of any cardboard or wooden box of a suitable size, from which the lid and one side has been removed. The box should be smoothly covered with silk or brocade, and lined with silk or satin in some contrasting color. The bottom should be thickly padded, so that it may serve as a cushion, and the outer edges should be bordered with thick silk cord. The useful pockets round the sides are made of wide satin ribbon or silk, as preferred, gathered at the top, and run through with an elastic, so that they may serve to hold small pieces of work, lace, scissors, tapes, etc. A small ribbon strap on one side forms a resting place for the thumb and at the back of the box loops of narrow ribbon are arranged to hold four reels of cotton. The cotton can easily be used in this way without removing the reels from their places.

New Buckles.

Even on the best gowns one sees the new immense buckle in front or back.

It must not be worn at the waist line, but so few gowns have a waist line any more that this advice is superfluous.

They are worn at the top of the high skirt, at the bust or a little lower than the shoulder blade at the back. They are five or six inches round, and studded with immense stones.

Cabochons of turquoise, pearls, corals and emeralds are all used. These are cut round or in points, and are bedded in the metal. Many of them have heavy fringes hanging from the lower side.

These are worn on any kind of empire or Grecian frock.

Chinese Slippers.

Now that the importers bring over Chinese slippers large enough for the American woman's foot, they are having popularity. They wear forever and a day as a bedroom slipper and look very quaint and pretty.

Those who wear them say they are comfortable. The price is not beyond the average purse and one is sure of having a slipper that will not wear out in half a season, as the Turkish slippers do.

cheeks swelling, his red hair bristling and his voice ringing in its highest key. "Bring him back? You just bet I will. That's why I'm sheriff of Pinal county."

Slim whirled out of the door as if propelled by a gigantic blast. Echo fell fainting at her mother's feet.

CHAPTER XIII.

FORTH to the land of dead things, through cities that are forgotten, faded Dick Lane. Tricked by his friend, with the woman he loved lost to him, he wandered onward.

Automatically he took up again his quest for buried treasure. That which in the flush of youthful enthusiasm and roseate prospects of life and love had seized him, as a passion was now a settled habit, and fortunately so, for it kept him from going mad. He had no thought of gain, only the achievement of a fixed purpose, a monomania.

With this impulse was conjoined a more volitional motive—he wished to revenge himself upon the Apaches and chiefly upon the renegade McKee, whom he supposed still to be with them. Somehow he blamed him rather than Jack Payson as being the chief cause of his miseries. "If he had not stolen the buried gold I would have returned in time," he muttered. "He is at the bottom of all this. As I walked away from Jack in the garden I felt as if it was McKee that was following me with his black, snaky eyes."

Accordingly Dick directed his way to a region reputed to be both rich in buried treasure and infested by hostile Indians. He wandered westward to Tularosa, then down to Fort Grant and toward the lava beds of southwestern Arizona. In all that arid land there was nothing so withered as his soul.

Jack, well mounted, with a pack mule carrying supplies, had picked up Dick's trail after it left Tularosa from a scout out of Fort Grant.

Slim Hoover headed for Fort Grant in his search for Jack. Although the ranchman had only a brief start of him, Slim lost the track at the river ford. Knowing Dick had gone into the desert, Jack headed eastward, while Slim, supposing that Jack was breaking for the border to escape into a foreign country, turned southward.

From the scout who had met Jack and Dick the sheriff learned that the two men were headed for the lava beds, which were occupied by hostile Apaches.

Detachments of the Third cavalry were stationed at the fort, with Colonel Hardie in command of the famous F troop, a band of Indian fighters never equaled.

In turn they chased Cochise, Victoria and Gerónimo with their Apache warriors up and down and across the Rio Grande. Hard pressed, each chieftain in turn would flee with his band first to the lava beds and then across the border into Mexico, where the United States soldiers could not follow. Hardie fooled Victoria, however. Texas rangers had met the Apache chief in an engagement on the banks of the Rio Grande. Only eight Americans returned from the encounter. Hardie took up his pursuit and followed Victoria across the river. The Indians had relaxed their vigilance, not expecting pursuit and despising the Mexican rurales. Troop F caught them off guard in the mountains. The fight was one to extermination. Victoria and his entire band were slain.

This was the troop which was awaiting orders to go after the Apaches.

Colonel Hardie told Slim that the Indians were bound to head for the lava beds. If the men for whom he was looking were in the desert the troop would find them more quickly than Slim and his posse.

Slim waited at Fort Grant for orders, writing back to Sagebrush telling him of his plans.

Fort Grant followed the usual plan of all frontier posts. A row of officers' houses faced the parade grounds. Directly opposite were the cavalry barracks fort. On one side of the quadrangle were the stables, and the fourth line consisted of the quartermaster's buildings and the post trader's store. Small ranchmen had gathered near the fort for protection and because of the desire of the white man for company. In days of peace garrison life was monotonous. But the Apaches needed constant watching.

As a soldier the Apache was cruel and cowardly. He fought dismounted, never making an attack unless at his own advantage. As infantryman he was unequalled. Veteran army officers adopted the Apache tactics and installed in the army the plan of mounted infantry, soldiers who move on horseback, but fight on foot, detaching one man of every four to guard the horses.

Mounted on wiry ponies inured to hardships, to picking up a living on the scanty herbage of the plains, riding without saddles and carrying no equipment, the Indians had little trouble in avoiding the soldiers. Leaving the reservation, the Apaches would commit some outrage and then, swinging on the arc of a great circle, would be back to camp and settled long before the soldiers could overtake them. Hampered by orders from the war department, which in turn was molested by the sentimental friends of the Indians, the soldiers never succeeded in taming the Apache until Crook cut off communications and thrashed them so thoroughly in these same lava beds that they never recovered.

In Slim's absence Buck McKee and his gang had taken possession of Pinal county. Rustlers and bad men were coming in from Texas and the strip. Slim's election for another term was by no means certain. He did not know this, but if he had it would not have made any difference to him. He was after Jack and at any cost would bring him back to face trial. The rogues of Pinal county seized upon the flight of Jack as a good excuse to down Slim. The sheriff was more eager to find Jack and learn from him that Buck's charge was false than to take him prisoner. He knew the accusation would not stand full investigation.

HINTS ABOUT SHOES.

Shoes Should Be Half Inch Longer Than the Feet.

Some people imagine that feet cannot possibly look neat unless they are small. This is a great mistake, for, however good and well made a boot may be, if it is too short or narrow it will be sure to bulge out at the sides and wear into an ugly shape.

The foot looks far better in a long boot or shoe, because it keeps its shape.

longer and takes away from the width of the foot.

As a last hint I would advise all those who can afford it to have two pairs of boots or shoes to wear alternately. There is nothing like a day's rest every now and again for keeping them in perfect condition.

As a rule, mothers hesitate about making boys' clothes at home, fearing that they may not be able to give a satisfactory tailored finish. There is really little difficulty turning out the small boy's Russian suit seen in the illustration if the pattern is followed carefully.

HARD FOR RUDDY TO EXPLAIN.

Wife's Apple Pie the Direct Cause of a Tragedy.

There was a tragedy out at the home of the Loring's the other day. The Loring's were married a little over a year ago. In the first week after their return from the wedding trip to the little flat which they had so much fun in furnishing Mrs. Loring offered as a dinner delicacy her first apple pie. He tried the pie, but was not equal to the task of eating any of it, and of course she wanted to know why.

"My dear, I never eat pie," explained Loring. "I thought I would try this just out of compliment to you, but I can't finish it. Besides, I am certain it will make me ill."

It was done with such skill that she put her arm lovingly about him and called him a "dear old thing" just for trying to eat it.

Now if there was any time at which Loring was at peace with the world it was when he was in front of a man's size slab of pie. But for a year he missed that pleasure in his new home.

The other night Loring had as a guest a chum of boarding-house days, and the latter was telling of Loring's table feats.

"Did you ever in all your life," he asked the young wife, "see a man who could eat so much pie as he can?" Hence the tragedy.

INDICTMENT OF MODERN DRESS.

Men's Wearing Apparel a Survival of Other Days.

Why does the being we call a "gentleman" wear around his neck a band of spotless whiteness and unbearable stiffness, at his wrists similar instruments of torture, and before his chest a rigidly starched linen plate? asks the Atlantic Monthly. No one outside of a madhouse would call these articles of apparel agreeable. There is for the custom no reason at all drawn from comfort, hygiene, or usefulness. There is, however, the ghost of a dead reason. Once upon a time a "gentleman" was presumed to do no work, and he dressed to show this, by putting on these visible signs that he never soiled his hands, sweated his neck, or bent his noble back. It matters not that we no longer believe in this definition of a gentleman; we did believe it once; its ghost rules on. No man is bold enough to appear in society without this impossible harness. Only some one who wishes to propose as a mild lunatic dares rebel. Addison said that the man who would clothe himself according to common sense would find himself in jail within a week.

Wood as Food.

In one quarter of the earth, at least, wood, in a certain form, serves as a common and constant article of diet, and that is the northern coast of Siberia. At several points the natives eat wood, and eat it because they like it. Even when fish is plentiful, wood usually forms a part of the evening meal of these natives, as testified by numerous travelers. Cleanly stripped larch logs near every hut in that region are silent witnesses to the general fondness for wood diet. The dish is prepared by scraping off thick layers immediately under the bark of the log. These are chopped fine and mixed with snow, the whole being boiled in a kettle. Sometimes a little fish roe, milk or butter is mixed with the wood. —Tit-Bits.

To Remove Old Paper from Walls.

Many women do their own paper hanging. For sanitary and other reasons the old paper should be removed from the walls. This is usually very difficult to do, but I have just removed the paper from 13 rooms, where it was made very easy in the following way: The paper was wet thoroughly with a thin, boiled flour paste, applied with whisk broom or whitewash brush, after which it came off in large strips. The time the paste was allowed to stay on varied with the thickness of the paper, and was easily determined by experiment. A cake turner was found to be of great use in starting the strips. I learned this "trick of the trade" from a paper hanger.

Encouragement.

There is a young clubman of Philadelphia who has been most persistent in his suit for the hand of the only daughter of a wealthy old merchant of that city.

Not long ago a friend meeting the young man on the street asked: "How are things, Tom? Has she given you any encouragement?"

"I should say so," replied Tom. "Only last night she told me that she would get every cent of the old man's fortune when he dies."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

"True," said Mrs. McCarthy. "He did."

"How was that?" asked her friend. "Pat couldn't read nor write, could he?"

"No," said Mrs. McCarthy, "nor swim."

TOO MUCH WORK FOR ONE WIFE.

Nigerian Needs Several Properly to Minister to His Comfort.

According to the Geographical Journal of London the marital relations among the peoples of Nigeria vary somewhat according to their state of civilization: "Polygamy is the rule, the reason given being that it is impossible for one woman to do all the work of the house, look after the children, prepare and cook the food, fetch the daily supply of water (often an arduous job), cultivate the plantation and go to market. The African is an exceedingly hungry person. It is the custom to eat several times a day when at home, and the men spend most of their day sitting in the palaver house or market place, while the women bring the food all day long. One wife could not possibly do this. Besides, the African lady encourages it, for she says, 'The more wives, the less work.'"

"Among the Aharas, Onichas, Obuwus and the lower class of pagan tribes in the interior, there is very little form of marriage. As soon as a man has the means, he pays the parents what they want, in the shape of goats, cows, beads and money, and takes the girl. There is no ceremony at all. The more wives the greater riches he is supposed to have and the better he will be looked after."

"If, of course, they can manage to seize a woman from the neighboring tribe while she is fetching water or working on her farm, so much the cheaper. With this method in vogue for centuries, no wonder that it is as much as a native's life is worth to go out of his own village, and that the country is so backward."

SHE WOULD END THE GAMBLING.

Wife's Conscience Aroused, But Action to Be Deferred.

"I think it's simply awful," said the first woman, "the way men remain away from home at night and risk their earnings at the game of poker. My husband is a perfect fiend about the game. One night he had three friends at our house and they played that horrid game until nearly half-past three in the morning."

"My!" exclaimed the other woman, the one with the 5A plaid waist. "And does he lose much money?"

"No," says the first one. "He hasn't really lost any money. In fact he's been winning a little bit. But that doesn't make it right. I would be opposed to gambling, no matter how much he might win. And just as soon as my husband wins enough to finish paying for my clothes that I've picked out I'm going to make him stop it. If he doesn't I'll leave him. I just simply won't live with a man who's a gambler."

Origin of Bank Check.

A Frenchman quoted in a Paris letter of the London Globe tells of the origin of the present day bank check. It is well known, he says, that the fog is so dense at times in London that everything is blotted out. That is the opportunity of the marauder, and he is not slow in turning it to his profit. At the beginning of last century the attacks made upon bank messengers and others became so numerous that tradesmen and manufacturers began to think seriously of devising some means of protecting themselves. They therefore invented the check, which enabled a man to go about with little ready money and renders useless the indiscreet exploration of a pocketbook.

A Quiet Salary.

Somewhere in a Minnesota town wrote a letter to the Minneapolis Journal objecting to a local clergyman because he "yelled" so much. After considering the matter the Journal reaches the conclusion that if the minister "yelled" in proportion to his salary he "wouldn't make as much noise as a mouse in a bag of feathers." The minister receives $350 a year and his parsonage. From this instance it doesn't seem as though a man on that salary ought to make very much of a racket, but perhaps he is elated because he has six or eight children and a nice dog.—Waterbury American.

What's Art?

Art is not, as the metaphysicians say, the manifestation of some mysterious idea of beauty, or good; it is not, as the aesthetical physiologists say, a game in which man lets off his excess of stored-up energy; it is not the expression of man's emotions by external signs; it is not the production of pleasing objects; and, above all, it is not pleasure; but it is a means of union among men, joining them together in the same feelings, and indispensable for the life and progress, towards well-being of individuals and of humanity.—Count Tolstoy.

How to Cook Possum.

ADVERTISE THE TOWN

Suggestions From an Expert as to a Publicity Campaign.

BUSINESS MEN IN CHARGE.

First Important Duty Is to Lay Plans For Securing a Larger Rural Population From Which to Draw Local Trade—Present Facts That Appeal.

More than a hundred cities and towns in the United States are now conducting successful advertising campaigns in their own behalf. Some Canadian cities also boom themselves by this direct method of publicity. In a recent paper read at a meeting of commercial clubs by Curtis L. Mosher, manager of the publicity bureau of St. Paul, some valuable suggestions were given. Mr. Mosher's remarks on municipal advertising are applicable to any town which desires to present its attractions to the outside public.

Among other things he says: "No municipal advertising campaign can succeed until it has the united support of practical business men. Somebody must be responsible for the collection of necessary funds, even though only a moderate and economical campaign is decided upon. Some one must be responsible for the results. Otherwise the campaign will be only desultory and unsatisfactory. The best and most practical man the municipality can bring forward should be made chairman of the general committee in charge of the work or be officially designated by some similar arrangement as the manager and director in charge of the work."

"The best beginning that a municipality can make in considering an advertising campaign is to look well to its appearance, attractiveness and local improvements."

Mr. Mosher dwells upon the importance of clean and well lighted streets, good sidewalks, the removal of dilapidated buildings along business streets, a first class hotel, a public library, attractive approaches to the railway station, rest rooms for women and public drinking fountains.

"As no town or city," continues Mr. Mosher, "can grow faster than the business from its local and tributary population permits, the first important duty of local business men is to consider the possibility of securing a larger rural population on which to draw for increased business. To get this population and to build up the agricultural resources of the tributary territory is one of the important ends to be sought in the local advertising campaign."

"The merchants with country trade should get lists of friends of their customers living in distant states and send them a letter framed up something like this: 'Mr. —, who is a prosperous farmer living — miles from this town, is successfully farming — acres and this year raised such and such crops, clearing such and such profits. He has given me your name, and I am writing you to tell you of the splendid agricultural resources of this section and the excellent opportunities near this town and adjacent to the farm operated by your friend, which you may perhaps wish to utilize.' Make the letter strong and to the point. Set forth the kinds of soil and crops, the values of land, etc., so that the man who gets it will have a clear idea of the situation."

"Inclose with the letters lists of farms for sale within easy reach of the city; also tracts of unimproved lands."

"If the business men of the town can secure from a hundred farmer customers the names of only five farmer friends or relatives in the old home districts," it means 500 agriculturists upon whom direct advertising work may be started. Each hundred farmers added to the tributary rural population means $100,000 a year added to the trade of the city or town. Such work can be done at the cost of a few postage stamps and a little effort."

Mr. Mosher dwells at considerable length upon the desirability of keeping commercial clubs supplied with local data and information; of having county exhibits at the state fairs; of securing state and district conventions; of having products marked "Made in —."

"The most dangerous error commonly made in direct advertising for the city or town is to yield too far to the natural feeling of local pride and construct the advertisement or printed matter in such a way that as a matter of fact it is more energetic in praising and placing the city in an agreeable light than it is in presenting purely business facts and arguments that will appeal to a business man."

"Give all your forms of direct advertising a neat and substantial appearance. Decorative effects do not appeal to business men. By all means publish a booklet even though it cannot be pretentious. Fill it with facts and terse business arguments and use all the illustrations you can. Edit it carefully to see that all its statements can be proved and that there is no waste of words. It should answer the question, 'Why, as a business man, investor, farmer or citizen in search of summer outing attractions or a suitable residence or city, should I be interested in —?' This is the best guide to the proper construction of a booklet that can be given without extended comment."

HAS FINE HEAD FOR BUSINESS.

Woman's Methods That Aroused Wonder and Admiration.

"If I had my wife's head and nerve I'd own half of Wall street in less than five years," said the man. "It is the way she manages the clothes proposition that aroused me to wonder and admiration. Here is an example of her thrift."

"Early last month she bought a broadcloth dress which, with the extra charge for alterations, cost $55. Well, after she got the suit home she didn't like it. The store objected at first to taking it back, but her persuasive tongue won them over, and after deducting $5 for the alterations, they refunded the money. Last week, when, nosing around, she saw that same suit on sale for $35. My wife, it seems, has such a peculiar figure that the suit, after being made to fit her wouldn't fit anybody else, so there was that $50 garment, and cheap at the price, going for almost one-third off. She of course snatched up the bargain. No more fitting or making over was necessary, so even when counting in her $5 for alterations, she saved $15 on the deal. I'd just like you to show me any man who could come out that well on a transaction in clothes."

CUSTOM PUZZLED THE VISITOR.

Wedding Ring Arrangement That Englishman Thought Queer.

"Of all your queer American customs," said the Englishman, "and you have many, you know—oh, yes, very many—the queerest is that of the oldest daughter of the first marriage of a woman who has been married twice wearing her mother's first wedding ring."

"How is that?" said the American woman. "That sounds rather complicated. I am afraid I didn't just catch it."

The Englishman repeated.

"In the two weeks that I have been in New York," he elucidated still further, "I have met four maiden ladies of 35 to 45 years of age who wore wedding rings. I asked for an explanation, and each time I found that it was the ring with which the lady's father married her mother. When the mother married again she gave the ring to her oldest daughter. Don't you think that queer?"

"I certainly do," said the American woman, "still I can't believe that it is a national 'custom' or I should have heard of it before."—New York Press.

Lived Long as Hermit.

There has been discovered in the Australian "bush" or forests a wild Irishman, who had been leading a hermit life for a quarter century. He was of gigantic stature and enormous strength—a good advertisement for vegetarianism, as he had not touched animal food since his retirement from civilization. His hair was four feet long, matted and of considerable thickness. He told the police he was a follower of Christ, Samson and Hercules. His name is John Bernard Fitzgerald and he is 72 years of age. He has never bathed, regarding the practice as irreligious and unnatural. The combined force of half a dozen police, however, compelled him to overcome his scruples.

Paid for Bride by the Pound.

In the village of Kolked, in Hungary, it has since time immemorial been customary for the bridegroom to give the bride's parents some compensation before the wedding. The other day a peasant farmer named Kotvos and the parents of his pretty young betrothed could not come to terms as to the amount, and so they agreed to make the mayor arbitrator. That good man, a cattle dealer, valued the bride at 60 cents a pound. As she weighed 86 pounds the happy bridegroom had to pay only $51.60, and thought himself lucky to get a wife so cheap.

Chemical Formulas.

In chemistry the elements are represented by accepted abbreviations, called symbols, each of which indicates a single atom of the element. When more than one atom is to be represented, figures are placed to the right of the symbol either above or below the line. A molecule representing a compound is indicated by a series of such symbols called a formula; thus alcohol has for its formula C₂H₆O, which shows that a molecule of this substance contains two atoms of carbon, six of hydrogen and one of oxygen.

Breaking the Rule.

"At our establishment," said the merchant, "we are training our employees to say 'Good-morning,' or 'Good-afternoon' at the telephone, instead of 'Hello.'"

How does it work?

"It works very well, indeed. Seems to please our customers and gives the establishment an air of dignity. The only trouble we have is with me. I'm the president, you know, and I forget. There's nobody to jog my memory nor call me down. Otherwise it works all right."

The Value of Politeness.

Hollow trees are always the stiffest, but the mightiest oak, it is found, can bend. The more exalted a man is by station, the more powerful should he be by kindness. There is no policy like politeness, since a good manner often succeeds where the best tongue has failed. Politeness is most useful to inspire confidence in the timid and encourage the deserving.—The Sunday Strand.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

A French scientist has discovered one secret of long life. His method deals with the blood. But long ago millions of Americans had proved Electric Bitters prolongs life and makes it worth living. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, rebuilds wasted nerve cells, imparts life and tone to the entire system. Its a godsend to weak, sick and debilitated people. "Kidney trouble had blighted my life for months," writes W. M. Sherman, of Cushing, Me., "but Electric Bitters cured me entirely." Only 50c. at Phillips Drug Company.

THE VERY BEST.

Have any of our readers seen a recent copy of the Cincinnati Weekly Enquirer? If not, it will pay to send for a copy, if for no other purpose than to note its present great worth as an educator in all things that tend to make life prosperous, and home, the happiest place on earth.

The editor by asking its readers to criticize and suggest improvements; and following advice thus obtained is enabled to produce a paper that exactly fits needs of a family and a material aid to father, mother and children in reaching that higher level in social life, where content and comfort reigns supreme.

Father obtains ample information that guides in the where, when and how to regulate and increase the income from his efforts. The mother in management of household affairs, practical economy, government of children, and other duties that makes her toil a labor of love. Children's minds and hearts are freed from thoughts of questionable amusements and frivolities of life, and encouraged to emulate all that is helpful in planning for a useful future in life.

The Grand Idea being that; "As are our Homes, so will be the Community, State and Nation."

A most desirable help, is a non-sectarian sermon each week, as preached by that Biblical Student Pastor Chas. T. Russell; a forcible reminder of the spiritual and temporal rewards gained by righteous living as preferable to a Godless life that brings nought but misery to the home.

Other departments and features are above the ordinary, the unanimous verdict of its readers being: "The cleanest and best family Weekly known to them."

PARIS BALL CLUB IS AROUSING ENTHUSIASM.

Stock is Being Subscribed and Team Will Go Into Contest to Win.

PARIS, Ky., Feb. 12.—The sale of the Lawrenceburg franchise of the Blue Grass League of baseball clubs to Paris, was received here with enthusiasm by the large number of baseball enthusiasts.

Mr. J. C. Elkin, Jr., who represented Paris at the meeting when the deal was consummated reached home this morning and immediately went to work securing the necessary amount of money to place the club on a strong financial basis. Mr. Elkin met with success and believes that before the beginning of another week the entire amount will be subscribed, when the stockholders will meet and file articles of incorporation, and elect a board of directors who will in turn elect a president, secretary, treasurer and manager.

Mr. Elkin is the only person mentioned for manager of the team and his well known playing ability and knowledge of the game cause local fans to hope that Paris will be right in the scramble for pennant honors. The complete organization of the club, it is believed, will be effected by the next meeting of the league which will be held in this city Tuesday, February 23.

PROMINENT RICHMOND LAWYER BADLY HURT.

Hon. W. B. Smith Painfully Burned at His Home in Madison.

RICHMOND, Ky., Feb. 12.—What came near being a fatal accident and one which proved to be almost a remarkable escape, was experienced here early yesterday morning by Hon. W. B. Smith, aged about 65, and one of the best and most widely known citizens throughout the State.

It has for the last many years been a custom of Mr. Smith when first arising in the morning, to exercise with physical culture movements. During the exercise of the morning, in some unknown manner his night robe became ignited, and before he realized it, the blaze was streaming up his side and back. His own coolness, and self control are solely responsible for the saving of his life, for instead of running for assistance, he began to fight the blaze, at the same time disrobing. In the terrible experience which ensued his hands were severely burned about the body.

LONG SEARCH IS REWARDED.

Whitley County Fugitive Captured After Twelve Years.

BARBOURVILLE, Ky., Feb. 12.—Capt. Givens, of the Middlesboro military company arrived at Williamsburg with Charles Herndon, who was apprehended in Denver, Col., and who is charged with killing his wife on Jellico Creek, Whitley county, twelve years ago. The capture of Herndon followed a twelve-years' search through parts of the United States and Mexico. The prisoner was living in Colorado under the name of Charles Howard.

Herndon and his wife formerly lived near this city, but did not get along together, and separated, his wife going to Whitley county. Herndon followed and importuned her to return. It is claimed she agreed to do so, and left her Whitley county home with Herndon. Before reaching this county, Herndon is alleged to have placed a revolver to her head and have blown her brains out. Great excitement was occasioned, and at the time a reward of $500 was offered for Herndon's capture, but he successfully eluded capture for twelve years.

JAMES BROWDER GETS

THE DEATH SENTENCE

Negro Charged With Killing James Cunningham is Sentenced to Hang.

DANVILLE, Ky., Feb. 12.—Jury trying James Browder, a negro charged with killing James Cunningham rendered a verdict at 11 o'clock yesterday inflicting death sentence.

The jury was given the case late Wednesday afternoon, but reported in thirty minutes, hardly having had time to consider the case, and were released until morning, being placed in the custody of the sheriff in the meantime.

The prospect of a brilliant flow of oratory attracted a large crowd to the court house and throughout the entire session of court the spacious court room was packed by interested spectators.

John B. Rodes opened the argument for the defense. He was followed by former Congressman John S. Rhea, for the State, who in turn, was followed by Judge J. C. Sims, for the defense. Commonwealth's Attorney Thomas concluding the argument for the prosecution.

GOES TO CINCINNATI.

Mrs. Bettie Johnson of the firm of Johnson and Wills and their trimmer, Miss Mullins, of Louisville, left Friday for Cincinnati to attend the openings and remain for about two weeks. Miss Mullins will go from there to Louisville for a stay of two weeks.
